

Character Analysis Roleplaying (CARP)

Background

This is a tabletop roleplaying game (TTRPG). Most TTRPGs build collaborative narratives—the players work together to tell a story. Some build a story but are played alone (like this one).

This game is a hack of another,¹ and in it you are roleplaying as (playing the role of) an Author writing a Narrative. Before you can write the Narrative, you must find Your Writing Space and gather Your Tools & Medium. You then interview a Potential (like an actor) and help them determine which Character they are as you create the Narrative about how this Character came to find themselves in the story.

Instructions

Things You Need

You need these instructions, a Journal sheet, a D6 die (regular dice from board games are D6), a copy of “The Most Dangerous Game,” a pencil, and some imagination.

The Die

When rolling, you may be told to “roll 1D6,” which means to roll a D6 once (“roll 2D6” means roll it twice, or roll two D6 dice together, and add the results; “roll 3D6” means roll three times, and so on).

How to Play

1. Write your name, the date, and the class period you’re in on the Journal sheet.
2. Roll 1D6 to determine what path your Potential is taking:

Result	Path
1-3	Hero’s Path (Rainsford)
4-6	Villain’s Path (Zaroff)

3. Fill in the Character Path your Potential is taking.
4. Roll 1D6 to determine Your Writing Space:

Result	Your Writing Space	Effect
1	Your home office	Calm
2	Shared area at home	Distracted
3	Library	Quiet
4	Coffee Shop	Jittery
5	On the couch	Annoyed
6	roll again	-

¹ Last Tea Shop Complete, the inspiration for this game, is a solo TTRPG about running a tea shop at the edge of limbo. Its game text is ©2022 by Spring Villager. The game’s format is open for hacking & remixing under a CC-BY 4.0 license.

5. Fill in Your Writing Space and its effect.
6. Roll 1D6 to determine Your Writing Tool & Medium:

Result	Tool	Medium	Effect
1-2	Laptop	None	Cold
3-4	Pen	roll 1D6 (1-3, looseleaf; 4-6, notebook)	Even-tempered (and Scattered if looseleaf)
5-6	Pencil	roll 1D6 (1-3, looseleaf; 4-6, notebook)	Unsure (and Scattered if looseleaf)

7. Fill in Your Writing Tool & Medium and their effect(s).
8. Write the introduction to the Narrative in the Journal area. For example: “As I write on my laptop in my local library, a Potential enters. He is quiet and cold as he sits across from me, his eyes slowly studying me as I study him...”
9. Roll 2D6 to determine the first question you ask the Potential:

Result	Interview Questions
2	What do you think is the most dangerous big game animal?
3	What do you enjoy outside of hunting?
4	What thrills you?
5	What frustrates you?
6	Where are the companions you had before coming to the island?
7	How did you come to the island?
8	Where were you before the island?
9	What bores you?
10	What disappoints you about your fellow man?
11	What do you think of your prey?
12	What motivates you?

10. Write your question and the Potential’s answer as the next part of the Narrative (you make up the answer taking into consideration the effects and the story itself, but remember this is before the story starts; how would this Character answer?).
11. Repeat Steps 9 and 10 twice (for a total of three questions you ask the Potential; if a roll results in the same question twice, re-roll).
12. The final question always asked is, “Who are you?” Have the Potential answer that. Once they do, they become the Character.
13. Close the Narrative in a way that makes sense for the Character and the story.
14. Either write a final draft or record audio/video of the Narrative and submit it on Google Classroom (the rubric is attached to the assignment there).
